NEVER FORGET!

Despite temperatures in the 90s, a crowd gathered at the Kentucky Veterans Cemetery North on Eibeck Lane in Williamstown on May 28 to honor those men and women who have been laid to rest at the cemetery.

Rep. Royce Adams, D-Dry Ridge, who will be retiring from the Kentucky House of Representatives this year, was the keynote speaker.

William Dirr, a World War II veteran, salutes during a Memorial Day ceremony. Wreaths, donated by Grant County Deposit Bank, were placed at the base of each flag representing each branch of service.

BUDGET WOES

Cuts concern sheriff

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

More than $100,000 is being slashed from next year's Grant County Sheriff's Office proposed budget— a move that will severely hamper services for the county, according to Sheriff Chuck Dills.

"I'll do whatever possible so we continue to respond to calls," he said. "But, the problem is, there is an effect to it. If they're going to eliminate money for us to do our job, we're going to have to eliminate some sort of service."

The 2012-13 budget for the sheriff's office proposed by Grant County Judge-Executive Darrell Link provides $101,263 less in funding from the office's current year budget.

The budget, which includes a 1.8 percent raise for employees, has $1.028 million in expenditures.

The fiscal court will vote on the second reading of the county budget, which also includes all other county departments, during its June 4 meeting at 7 p.m. at the Grant County Courthouse.

"There's not a whole lot to cut in our line items," Dills said. "Our salaries are fixed. Fuel cost is pretty well fixed. Retirement's fixed."

"It's not like we have slush funds that we buy toys with," he said.

Dills originally asked for funding to purchase three new vehicles that are needed because of cruisers with high-mileage and continuous service and repair costs.

However, only one vehicle was kept in the final proposed budget.

The money budgeted for vehicle repairs also has been reduced from $18,000 this year to $16,000 for next year.

As of May 24, the sheriff's office had already spent more than $17,000 in vehicle repairs with still more than a month to go in the fiscal year.

A log keeps track of how many miles are on each vehicle and when they need to be replaced or moved out of the road crew.

One vehicle costs an estimated $24,000 plus another $15,000 in necessary equipment, including a mobile data unit, installed.

There are currently four vehicles out of service, said Chief Deputy Sheriff Troy Hagedorn.

Hammons, Linder square off in November election

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

Brian Linder and Wanda Crupper Hammons will go head-to-head at the polls once again, but this time for state representative.

In the 2010 general election, incumbent Linder handily defeated Hammons in the race for Grant County magistrate for the second district.

Linder garnered 1,218 votes compared to Hammons' 718 votes.

However, the pool of voters will be much larger in November as the candidates vie to replace long-time legislator Royce Adams, who is retiring as representative of 61st district in the House.

Hammons won a decisive victory in the May 21 primary against fellow Democratic

Election FYI

Turnout- The voter turnout in Grant County for the May 21 primary election was slightly higher than the state turnout.

Grant County had a 15 percent turnout, meaning 2,390 ballots were cast out of 15,893 registered voters. Statewide, 14 percent of Kentucky voters showed up at the polls.

Complaint- There were a total of 31 calls generating 32 complaints and inquiries to the Attorney General's Election Hotline during the primary election.

Of those, one came from Grant County concerning an election official. The Attorney General's office does not release details of complaints.

challenger Camilla "Kay" Patton by 648 votes.

In the three-county district, Hammons won by a large margin in Grant and Owen counties while Patton had a 107-vote advantage in Gallatin County.

The race was much closer for Linder, who defeated fellow Republican Scott Bruce by 79 votes.

PERSONALLY SPEAKING

The best part....

As school winds and summer heats up, there are a lot of activities going on. Everyone's patience wears thin waiting for the cold weather to move out and warmer weather to move in. This is my favorite time of the year. It's not overbearingly hot but not too cold either. Everything is fresh and new and clean. But this year it's bittersweet. As I think about the end of the school year coming to a close the more I think I'm going to miss going to Grant County Middle School and Mason Corinth Elementary until school starts again. Both schools have so much to offer to students and parents. Several weeks ago, Grant County Middle School had a play that featured

"Beauty and the Beast." As I went to talk to the students, I wondered what kind of thoughts I would get. How did they feel? I'm sure they were all nervous, I for one don't think I could've done what they pulled off and I'm a grown woman. Much less being in middle school and all that entails.

"Beauty and the Beast" was one of my favorites growing up. They did such an awesome job but what is even more outstanding is that this play was put on by Elsa Blake, among others and the students. As I sat down with the students, they flooded me with thoughts and perspectives but it was awesome. They seemed more mature than what I remember eighth graders being. They talked and talked. Of course, I think that my presence and the fact that that I was keeping them out of class had something to do with their extensive insight. It was such a privilege to sit down with these students and get to know them on a more personal level. There are so many students that go to Grant County Schools that it is hard to know them all. So to sit with these students and listen to them talk about how they wanted to do this as a career and how proud they were of what they had done genuinely touched me.

Several weeks ago, Mason Corinth had asked me to come read to the students for the "community members read to students." I arrived at the school and had to laugh at myself. I was nervous about getting in front of students to read. They were respectful and well-mannered but it seems so strange to me that I've become a person kids respect and are on their best behavior for when truth be known I am just a big kid myself. I still do cartwheels, play in the yard and like to vegetate on the couch on a Sunday afternoon. To just sit back and listen and watch these kids come alive is something to watch. We can all learn from kids. They see things like no other and tend to be painfully honest. Students, have a great time on you're summer vacation but know that you will be missed and that I can't wait to see what you all will bring to the table next school year.

My time has come to say goodbye

About two years ago, I came to Grant County to be a sports writer.

It was a dream job from the beginning, being able to cover sports since I didn't have the athletic ability to go anywhere beyond high school cross country.

After getting my degree in journalism from Northern Kentucky University in 2009, I began a year-long search for a local sports writer position.

I found it in July of 2010 in this community.

During this time I have learned how community journalism works, the fun times, the hard times and even the sad times.

I have done a lot of soul searching for a long time and have decided it is my time to move on to a different career.

After countless hours covering the sports teams

Matt BIRKHOLTZ

Sports Writer

for Williamstown Independent Schools and Grant County Schools, I realized how much time I was spending away from my fiancé and my family.

Family is an important part of my life and without them, I wouldn't be where I am today. They have backed me up in whatever career I have chosen, even when it meant sacrificing time with them.

I am getting married in nine days and I looked at what I have put into my work here at the Grant County News. I decided I needed to find a job where I am coming home at a decent time on a regular basis.

I want to be able to call up friends and be able to go have a drink or watch a game with them.

Life is too short and because I'm getting ready to start a new chapter in life and in all fairness to my new wife, I don't want to be married to my job. Being a journalist is tough. It's a lot of nights, weekends and long hours, especially for a sports writer.

My dad worked in education for 39 years, including a majority of my 26 years of life in administration. I promised myself that I wouldn't invest my life into my job and miss out on family moments.

Obviously, sports writing no matter whether I was the sports writer here or worked as the beat writer for the Cincinnati Reds, the amount of sacrifices journalists make, is just something I don't want to do to my family.

Writing is an integral part of me and I will not stop writing once I leave on June 1, but I will not let it keep me away from what I hold dear.

I plan on writing a young adult novel about baseball. Hopefully, it can be published.

I want to say thank you to the Grant County News for giving me this wonderful opportunity. I have enjoyed my time with the paper and getting to know the community over the past couple of years. You are some of the kindest people I have met and I hope that the sports teams will thrive after I am gone. God bless all of you.

A WORD FROM OUR READERS . . .

Dry Ridge Firemen donate Build-a-Bear

On April 5, the Dry Ridge Fire Fighters and Dry Ridge Elementary Reading program held the 2nd Annual Build A Bear drive for Shriners Hospital in Lexington and Cincinnati, Ohio. Over 70 elementary students and parents enjoyed hot dogs and ice cream while building 100 bears to be distributed to the hospitals. The firefighters wanted to make sure each child in both the Lexington and Cincinnati hospitals received a bear for Easter. Each elementary child picked out a bear, placed a heart inside and took it to the ladies from Build A Bear to finish the bear. The students also included in the Build A Bear box, a personal message and an Easter present. Thanks to Chief Tom Jump, Assistant Chief Calvin Crupper and the staff of the Dry Ridge Fire Department, Dry Ridge Elementary and the many individuals who contributed to this project. Shriners Hospital for Children is a pediatric health care system dedicated to improving the lives of children by providing specialty care, innovative research and outstanding teaching programs. Children up to age 18 with orthopedic conditions, burns, spinal cord injuries and cleft lip and palate are eligible for care regardless of a family's ability to pay.

Red Cross thankful for community support

I am the Disaster Action Team Leader for the American Red Cross here in Grant County. During my tenure with the Red Cross, I had my first experience at opening a shelter in Grant County for the clients who were affected by the tornado that struck Northern Grant County on March 2, 2012. I want to commend the volunteers and businesses that responded so quickly to the needs of the people of Grant County. My heart was overwhelmed with the tremendous turnout of people wanting to help at the shelter, help with cleanup, help provide clothing, etc. I also want to commend my Grant County team members who immediately responded when getting the call and helped out the entire weekend with whatever was asked of them. The actions of all involved in any aspect of the events that weekend showed just how much the people of Grant County are always here to help each other. I can't end this note without thanking Wal-Mart. The manager showed up at the shelter and immediately asked what was needed and provided us immediately with what was asked. He even kept checking throughout the weekend to see if anything else was needed. I'd like to also thank all of you who have sent monetary donations. I received nearly $10,000 in the mail to be deposited into the Grant County account of the American Red Cross. So this letter is to just say thank you to you the citizens of Grant County and my Disaster Action Team members: Sherry Hall, Nancy Owens, Gayle Jackson, Jimmy Jackson, Wanda Hammons, Marc Tepe and Greg Nix. I truly feel blessed to serve and volunteer for such a caring community.

DOWN AND DIRTY

Desert blooms in Kentuckiana?

We have a beautiful prickly pear cactus in bloom right now that is flaunting yellow and orange blooms like a peacock does feathers. It is tucked in a garden on the south side of the house so it thrives. In fact this cactus is native to Kentucky even if most people only associate it with the desert Southwest. When it comes to prickly plants most of us automatically think of cacti in the desert; there are others with a more subtle prick to consider for the mixed border. Years ago I was visiting a garden and saw the prettiest combination of perennials that included a tall mass of Veronica longifolia backed by the erect blooms of acanthus spinosus or bear’s britches. The graceful, nodding bloom spikes of Veronica and the unwavering and prickly appearance of Acanthus was so effective and so pretty that I quickly scribble the idea down on my note pad filled with stolen garden design ideas.

Garden appeal

The scrolling leaves of the ornate Corinthian column were modeled after acanthus leaves which gives you an idea of its appearance. Acanthus mollis and A. spinosus both have good garden appeal. Highly textured foliage that is glossy and dark green looks prickly but isn’t all that bad to the touch, the potential pain comes from the blooms. Each bloom has a prickly collar, or bract, from which it is nestled in. Another prickly garden perennial worthy of attention is Eryngium, or sea holly, the bloom reminds me of a medieval jester with his pointed collar. The silvery-blue, dome-shape bloom is set off by this prickly bract where the bloom meets the stem. This bract is especially whimsical on eryngium alpinum. E. alpinum reaches about two feet. A more dramatic sea holly, at least based on height, is Mrs. Willmot’s Ghost or Eryngium giganteum. E. giganteum reaches three to four feet and creates a silvery, almost steely, effect in the garden. It got its common moniker, Mrs. Willmott’s Ghost, because this English gardener took Eryngium seeds with her when she would visit other people’s gardens and sprinkle the seeds here and there unbeknownst to her host. It is said that wherever Mrs. Willmott went, her “ghosts” would pop up. Its ghostly reputation is also perpetuated by the plants habit to reseed itself but skipping a year or two before it shows up again.

Rattlesnake master

The prairie perennial called rattlesnake master, or Eryngium yuccafolium, dots our tall grass prairie and once established will dig deep roots that allow it to withstand drought and clayey soils. As you might suspect, e. yuccafolium has yucca-like foliage and is most appreciated for its form and texture because the flowers are smaller than other Eryngium species and the color is a muted silver-green. This one doesn’t have the collar or bracts, like the other species but it’s over all “cool” appearance makes it worth having. Echinops, or globe thistle is another prickly favorite but with a little more color than Eryngium. The stems are silver and the foliage a glossy deep green. Echinops ritrois probably the most commonly grown species, with blue spiky flower “balls”. There are cultivars that have purplish blooms, like ‘Taplow Blue’ and ‘Blue Cloud’; and one that has a pink tint called ‘TaplowPurple’. The straight species has the best garden vigor by my standards, reaching up to five feet in height. Prickly plants tend to like full sun and well-drained soil. Be sure you have a good full-sun situation if you have really rich garden soil.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS Hope for ‘Good Daughters’

When my sister was little, she wiped spaghetti sauce from her mouth with a piece of bread.

This is a significant event in our family’s history because, as the Good Daughter, it is probably the one and only time Peggy ever got in trouble.

In a nanosecond, Peggy did the bread-wipe and Dad reached over and whacked her hand, which stunned us all. Not that Dad whacked one of us, but that it was Peggy—the Good daughter!

It turned out not to be a willful act of rebellion or even playful mischief. Peggy had watched Dad sop spaghetti sauce on his plate with a piece of bread, and to her child-logic, sauce was sauce, whether on a plate or a face.

Dad felt terrible for thinking his Peggy could do anything bad and bought her a hamster that she named Daisy.

Since he had never bought me a hamster, I considered wiping my face with bread too, so I could get a present, but wisely discerned that I probably wouldn’t get away with it. I had a hunch only good Daughters got hamsters after they got in trouble.

I don’t remember if I ever hated my sister’s Good Daughterness when we were younger. If I did, I got over it.

Actually, I don’t want that role. There’s too much pressure and the job description stinks. My sister is the go to daughter when Mom or Dad needs anything. That’s mainly because I live 3,000 miles away, but I’m not too sure if things would be different if I lived closer.

I’m just not the good Daughter type.

Years ago, I had a friend who called herself a “recovering” Good Daughter.

Growing up, she never felt good enough, despite all her efforts. She said trying to please everyone, especially God, kept her from doing a lot of really bad things.

Grace Notes
Nancy
KENNEDY

“But while that might sound good,” she said, “I was doing it for all the wrong reasons.”

She said she grew up feeling grossly insecure, believing that God wouldn’t and couldn’t love her because of all her faults.

The other day I read a quote by Mark Twain that caught my attention: “They were good in the worst sense of the word.”

Not knowing the context, I have no clue what Twain meant by that. Maybe he was talking about those whose goodness or their striving for goodness gets in their way of living in God’s goodness and his grace.

The ancient prophet Isaiah wrote, “All our righteous acts are like filthy rags” (Isaiah 64:6). Even our “goodness” is not good and all our best efforts are no more than grimy rags if the motivation behind them is to somehow earn favor with God. That’s what my good Daughter friend realized. She said it wasn’t until she came to grips with the sin of her self-oriented “goodness” that she started to become free. She let go of trying hard to be good and discovered Christ’s goodness working itself out through her life.

“What I do on the outside might not look any different,” she said, “but it’s a huge difference on the inside. Now I do things because I know God loves me, not because I hope he will.” As for my sister, she knows that of the two of us, she’s the Good Daughter in our family, although, it’s not something she tries to be or necessarily wants to be. However, when it comes to God, we both know that we are both Good Daughters, not because of what we do or don’t do, but solely because of what Jesus has done.

No need to strive or compete, not with anyone else or even within ourselves. Everything we do, every law we attempt to keep, every good deed or sacrifice, isn’t to win the approval of our Father, but because we already have it.

That’s the hope for Good Daughters and wannabe Good Daughters (and Good Sons, too). Trying to be one only leads to insecurity, fear and eventual despair. But knowing you already are one leads to security, freedom and joy.

Interesting facts or information you’d like to share with the public: The Grant County Church of Christ is a friendly, enthusiastic, growing church, while retaining the simple, pleasant atmosphere of a by-gone era. The Grant County Church of Christ is committed to restoring New Testament Christianity to its pure form according to the New Testament example. The Grant County Church of Christ is also actively involved in the Grant County community. Members participate annually in the Senior Bash and the Back to School blowout, where they meet and spend time with fellow Grant Countians. Members of the Grant County Church of Christ have gone door to door to practically every home in the County on two occasions in an effort to talk with their neighbors about their physical and spiritual needs. Their goal is be of service and to show the example and teaching of Jesus in their everyday lives (1Peter 2:21).

At the Grant County church of Christ, one will experience “Worship the Way It used to Be.” The preaching is enthusiastic and Bible-centered (2 Timothy 4:2) The singing is congregational, with everyone joining in (Ephesians 5:19; Colossians 3:16). The Lord’s Supper is offered every first day of the week, in memory of the Savior’s death on the cross (Acts 20:7). Another important part of the worship is the offering up of prayers of thanksgiving, praise and cries for help from God the Father through Jesus Christ (Colossians 3:17). The members also give of their means as they have been prospered (Corinthians 16:1-1; 2 Corinthians 8:5; 9:6-10). At the Grant County Church of Christ the worship service is designed to be decent and orderly with the focus upon God Himself (1 Corinthians 14:40). Grant County Church of Christ is also the home of The Bluegrass Bible Institute. The school was established in 2009 as an effort to increase the accurate biblical knowledge that is so woefully lacking in our society. The more one knows about the Bible, the better equipped, he/she is are live proper lives and to teach others (2 Tim 2:2; 3:16-17). The Bluegrass Bible Institute is open to anyone desiring to study the Bible and related subjects on a deeper level. Women are welcome to attend as are current and prospective preachers, Bible class teachers, deacons, elders and anyone who is interested in a deeper understanding of God’s Word. Classes can be taken for credit or may be audited. Students at the Bluegrass Bible Institute receive sound Biblical instruction at the feet of well qualified instructors with years of experience. No tuition is charged. The class schedule is convenient, meeting one night per week on Thursdays. Transfer of credit to some other Christian colleges and universities is also available. Classes are Thursday nights from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Grant County Church of Christ. The current quarter will end May 9 and the fall quarter will begin Sept. 6. To register, call the Grant County church office at 859-824-6200 or e-mail us at jerrywc@juno.com. The school is under the oversight of the Grant County Church of Christ.

It's all a matter of perspective

A Matter of Perspective is an exhibition of 33 works of art by students with disabilities from 23 different schools and organizations across the state. It includes artwork by students grades K-12 in a variety of different styles and media. The exhibit was on display at Williamstown Independent Schools during April. The following students were selected as state winners from Grant County: Kayla Fugazzi with her charcoal drawing titled "He and I." Patrice Tucker with her marker drawing titled "Wild Animals." Dillion Hearn with his finger painting titled "Finger Tree." Cody Allphin with his chalk drawing titled "Crazy Hair." (Not pictured is Kayla Fugazzi)

Middle school cares about troops

When the Grant County Middle School National Junior Honor Society met to determine a worthy service project for the community, it only took them a few seconds to decide that they wanted to send a care package to Dillion Pelfrey, who is currently stationed in Afghanistan. He graduated from Grant County High School and his mother Bobbie Jo Pelfrey worked as a teacher and curriculum specialist at GCMS before accepting the Dry Ridge Elementary principal position. "There was no doubt that we wanted to do something special for Dillion. We think about him and his family all the time," said Sarah Boden, NJHS president.

Six friends think life is sweet with antiques

By Jamie Baker-Nantz
Editor

Q: What do you get when you mix six women who love antiques?

A: Dry Ridge's newest business venture – Sweet Buy and Buy on Hwy. 22.

Sweet Buy and Buy is an eclectic antique shop with some shabby chic, primitives and lots of repurposed items for sale in an old farmhouse. The shop comes complete with a wooden swing suspended from a sprawling tree for those not inclined to prowl the rooms filled with decorative items, but who want to just sit awhile.

The project began a month ago when Sharon Orsburn's tenants moved out of her rental house, she decided it was time to follow her dream of opening an antiques store or sell the house.

She mentioned her dilemma to her friend, Darlene Houchens, who is also her weekly day trip/shopping buddy. The pair spend at least one day a week traveling within a two or three-hour radius of Grant County to fulfill their love of "antiquing" or shopping for antiques.

Houchens thought it was time to open a shop, so the pair approached four other women – Mary Schoenman Lucas, Patti Turner, Anna Ray Martin and Candy Link, who shared their love of old things and next thing you know the six women, armed with brooms, cleaning supplies, hammers and drills were cleaning out the farmhouse so they could fill it with treasures – some from their own personal collections and others bought to resell.

"Our love of this drew us together," said Orsburn.

The shop unofficially opened on May 24. On May 25, four of the six were working to continue to fill the walls, corners and every space not already occupied with something.

The official grand opening was May 28. The store will be open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday and Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and 1 - 4 p.m. on Sunday.

"The timing was perfect," said Lucas, as she priced items.

In the home's cozy kitchen, visitors will find coffee brewing and cold soft drinks in the refrigerator. A counter serves as the check out station.

Orsburn and Houchens have previous business experience having owned antique stores and other retail businesses.

Orsburn, who is retired from E.

Thomas and Associates, owned Fancy Feet Shoe Store in Dry Ridge. Houchens, a native of Grant County, was the office manager for Dr. Michael Goodman's office for more than 15 years. She also owned Alley's Flowers and Gifts in Williamstown.

Patti Turner, of Pendleton County, has been dealing in antiques for years. She and Houchens met several years ago at an antiques show.

Lucas, an artist, owns Lucas Pools. She also owned Attic Garden Antique Store in Williamstown.

Link, also a native of Grant County, works for the Kentucky Department of Transportation, District 6 in Ft. Mitchell, but has bought and sold antiques for many years.

Martin is a retired teacher, who taught at Grant County Middle School. She also works with Lucas in her art studio.

For most of the women, the shop

Mary Schoenman Lucas prices an item as Darlene Houchens works on a bow for a wreath. Photos by Jamie Baker-Nantz is simply a chance to work with and around things they love. Whether it's vintage lace or a Pillbox hat or even a rusty old tin they turned into a flower pot, the women love preserving pieces of the past, often giving them new life as something different than their original purpose.

They often scour yard sales, antique auctions and even some items from their homes have made it to the shop.

"We love it and that's why it's easy for us," said Orsburn.

So far the public's response has been positive.

"We had some visitors from Indiana the other day," Houchens said. "We've had some who just come and sit under the shade trees."

Because they've got a fair amount of outdoor space, they hope to add a fall festival, as well as offer space for reunions and events such as weddings.

"We want to be known for our hospitality and atmosphere," Orsburn said. "We're all so comfortable with each other and we're having fun and that's what we want our customers to experience."

"But we also want people to know that this is not your grandmother's antique store," Lucas said.

Jailer faces 'tough' budget

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

Despite more than $220,000 in proposed cuts, Jailer Terry Peebles is optimistic he will survive the 2012-13 budget for the Grant County Detention Center.

The budget, which the fiscal court will vote on a second reading of during its June 4 meeting, includes proposed expenditures totaling $3.98 million while the anticipated revenues equal $3.63 million, according to numbers provided by the jail.

"I don't know how we're going to do it yet, but we'll meet our budget," Peebles said. "It's going to be tough. This is a tough budget, but I understand that (Judge-Executive Darrell Link) is in a tough position. He has to decide what the jail can get by on and what everybody else can get by on. I support the judge's decision and I support the budget. I'm just saying that it's going to be hard."

During his first budget in office, Peebles said he had to cut several hundred thousand dollars from his budget, mainly by relying more on part-time employees to cut down on benefit costs.

"We thought last year was, financially, very successful for us," he said.

For his second fiscal year budget, money has been slashed again, which has caused Peebles some concern.

Under the proposed budget, $15,000 has been cut for equipment repairs and $22,500 off heating and air maintenance and repairs.

Another $2,500 has been sliced for building repairs.

"With wear and tear and age, it needs maintenance," Peebles said about the jail.

Although there are multiple cuts, Peebles said he was able to get a 1.8 percent cost-of-living raise for employees put in the budget.

However, the money needed to fund the raises will have to be taken out of other line items.

Jail staff are currently looking at ways to help increase revenue to help alleviate financial problems.

The detention center already has increased from one to two state clean-up crews and the possibility of adding more inmates is open.

In the budget, there is an anticipated increase of $328,000 in revenue for state prisoners for next year from the current year.

"I'm in negotiations to try to double our SAP (Substance Abuse Program) inmates," Peebles said about other revenue streams. "I don't know if that's going to happen or not. We're trying. They can't decide if they want to start more programs or make the existing ones larger. I'm hoping that will happen this year, but I can't guarantee it."

In order to house more inmates, Peebles said things would have to be shifted around to make space.

When he was elected, Peebles said the jail was averaging 240 inmates a day.

That number has now increased to 333, he said.

"We are running at capacity," Peebles said. "I think we have 349 beds. My head count right now is like 355. We are full. If I had more room, I could fill it. I gave 12 inmates to Carter County because I didn't have the room to house them. I shouldn't have to give away money."

When Alice Ingram opened her two Dry Ridge businesses on May 17, she discovered that someone had stolen not just her peace of mind, but almost $50 that she'd collected for Grant County's Relay For Life.

"They didn't take any T-shirts. They didn't take any donuts, so what did they take? They stole $47.23 for people with cancer. That made me mad," Ingram said.

Ingram owns Custom Designs by Alice and Sugar Daddy's Bakery, which recently moved from Broadway to Hopperton Lane, off Ky. 22.

The suspect or suspects gained entry by using a crowbar to knock out a window. Once inside the building, they pulled out drawers, broke a mirror and made a mess.

But for Ingram, who is a volunteer with the American Cancer Society and participates in the annual Grant County Relay For Life, which is planned for Friday, June 1 at Grant County Park, the theft, even of less than $50, is personal.

She lost her mother in 2002 to a rare form of carcinoma. That's the first year Ingram organized a team and walked during the 12-hour event, which begins at 7 p.m. with survivor recognition followed by games, contests, prizes, entertainment and food.

She now serves on the Grant County Relay For Life committee, which is responsible for organizing the annual fundraiser.

"I care and I want to make a difference," Ingram said of her reason to relay. "The break in made me the maddest because of all the things they could have taken, they choose to take relay money, which hard-working people donated."

Ingram said that each time a customer placed a $1 bill or some change in the Relay For Life can, she explained that the money would be used to fund cancer research and for cancer programs that benefit local cancer patients.

"Every quarter makes a difference," she said. "Maybe not in my lifetime, but in my son or grandsons's lives, maybe that quarter or that dollar or that $50 dollars will be the money that funded the research to beat cancer."

For Ingram, the relay is a chance to offer support to people battling cancer as well as their families. It's a time to bring the community together for a common cause. It's a time to fight.

Last year's event raised $92,000. This year's goal is $100,000.

"The relay is important because it raises money for research and without research dollars they might not find a cure for cancer and if we don't keep trying they won't have the opportunity," she said.

2012 GRANT COUNTIAN OF THE YEAR

Parks, quality of life top mayor's priority list

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

Williamstown Mayor Rick Skinner may only be in the second year of his first term, but the list of accomplishments and projects is lengthy.

From helping orchestrate a multi-million dollar tourist attraction to the county seat to upgrading the city's parks system, Skinner has been busy.

And that doesn't even account for especially for the two local businesses he owns and operates — Skinner Furniture and Skinner's Self-Storage.

"Personally, I'm loving what I do," Skinner said. "I really enjoy the job and the challenges."

"I'm averaging a little over 40 hours a week for a part-time position," he said. "I was familiar with the amount of meetings, but just the amount of stuff that I needed to be here for and wanted to be a part of was a little bit of a shock, especially since we didn't replace the city administrator. I was able to take on more duties, which I wanted, because I really think it streamlines the city."

Since Skinner moved from city council member to mayor after the 2010 election, he has made parks and making Williamstown healthier a major initiative.

In 2011, Williamstown was one of only four Kentucky cities designated with Playful City USA status, recognizing the city's priority to get children active and healthy.

Under the program, the city was able to improve Webb Park with a new playground structure through a grant and community donations.

The city also has partnered with the local health department and Fitness For Life Around Grant County to improve facilities around JB Miller Park, including an expanded walking trail and the addition of picnic tables.

"It's just been a huge success," Skinner said about the park improvements. "Kids are out there all the time using it. We just recently got a Playful City designation for 2012. The first one was for 2011. We applied for the grant again and if we get it, that will really set Webb Park off as far as the playground area."

Skinner also helped organize a new recreational event to attract residents to Williamstown Lake. Paddle Williamstown, which will be held Aug. 25 this year, had 150 canoes and kayaks register last year.

"We wanted to introduce people to Williamstown Lake who hadn't been there in a long time or never been there," Skinner said. "We wanted to provide a safe environment for them to canoe and kayak." The biggest attention-grabber of Williamstown Mayor Rick Skinner is in his first term, but he's been busy getting grants for improvement projects. The Williamstown native was named the Grant Countian of the Year.

Skinner's time in office has been the planned Ark Encounter project, a proposed religious-themed tourist development off Ky. 36 that could bring 900 part-time and full-time jobs, along with a much-needed economic boost.

Although ground has yet to be broken on the project because of funding issues, Skinner said he is confident of its future in Williamstown.

"It's coming," he said. "The economy's slowing it down with financing. Their goal is to break ground in late fall, October. I believe they'll reach that."

"I think the impact will be immediate just because the work they'll put in with contractors and the amount of jobs to build the ark and everything associated with it," Skinner said. "They do say they want to use local contractors. I think it will be a shot in the arm for our economy just as soon as they start construction."

Another project on the horizon is a joint venture between the city and Williamstown Independent Schools to build an indoor aquatic center on the school's property.

The city and school board are waiting on architectural design plans.

Skinner said a ground breaking likely would not occur until late 2013 or early 2014.

"It's a quality of life issue for us," he said. "The more features you have in your city, the better chances you attract better businesses and higher paid positions. We just think it's one of the things that would be good to offer our citizens."

With a variety of plans in the works, Skinner said his biggest will be the construction of the city's new water plant.

The plant is in the early stages of design and city council has already purchased the land.

"We realize we've got to build a new one because of capacity," Skinner said. "Our existing plant couldn't meet the standards that they set (for 2014.) So, we have to build a new plant. That will be the biggest challenge I have in my term, the funding of the project. It's a $16 million project. We can't do it without grant money of at least $8 million. We can't put that on the citizens right after our waste water increases."

For his hard work and dedication, Skinner was recently honored at the annual Grant County Chamber of Commerce banquet.

Although he knew his wife, Williamstown Superintendent Sally Skinner, was going to be recognized for Excellence in Education, Skinner was surprised to learn he was named 2012 Grant Countian of the Year.

"To me, it was one of the highest honors I'll get," he said. "I'm sure of that. That's selected by your peers and that's very special. I was humbled by it."

SHERIFF

"Coverage-wise, it's not having an impact with them being down right now because we're able to shift other people and share some cruisers," he said. "But, the adverse effect of that is beating that cruiser up. It just compounds the problem if you don't address it. Someplace else, it's making it worse."

The sheriff's office uses vehicles stationed at the Grant County Judicial Center to do about 90 percent of transports because they have more mileage and wear and tear.

However, it may soon be necessary to switch some of those vehicles back to the road crew, which would mean the vehicle would run constantly for eight-hour shifts throughout the county in conditions that sometimes could be hard on the cruiser.

"When you put these constraints on us, we cannot provide the level of service that has not only become to be expected, but demanded, by the public," Hagedorn said.

Dills agrees. "Cars are going to break down," he said. "We may have to park cars or won't be able to patrol as much. We're already under patrolled now."

Another line item that Dills said needs more funding is for data.

The proposal only budgets $1,000 for 2012-13 even though the office has about $4,500 in contracts for law enforcement software, including the county tax program, and the website host agreement.

Last year, the budget for data was $8,500.

Dills originally proposed $15,000 in his budget for data because of the need to replace a server, a move that was recommended by the county's IT (information technology) technician.

There also is a need for replacements for a couple printers and computers, said Dills.

The sheriff's office generates approximately $950,000 in revenue and receives about $400,000 from the county, according to Dills.

Other than serving court papers, inspecting vehicles, transports and collecting taxes, Dills said his hands are tied when it comes to bringing in money.

The fiscal court have "hung their hats" on the fact that they have not raised taxes, said Dills, adding that several times the tax rate has actually been lower when they opted to not take the compensating rate.

"But, to me, that's not for seeing the future because the problem is expenditures are passing revenue," Dills said. "And, they know that."

Grant County is at an impasse and it may be necessary to think about raising taxes to generate more money for county departments that have scaled down budgets year after year, Hagedorn said.

"At some point, the solution to the problem can not be cut, slash, scale back," he said. "Every year, it's the same thing. It's never, come to the table and let's talk about the issues and what we can do to fix this. We all know what it is, but nobody wants to bite the bullet. We can't generate anymore revenue than we are. I'm not for big government. However, I'm for the size of government it takes to operate."

ELECTION

Linder received more votes than his opponent in all three counties in the district.

Williamstown attorney William Adkins also moved on to the general election to face Republican Thomas Massie in the state's 4th congressional district.

Among Grant County voters, Adkins received 402 more votes than his Democratic challenger, Greg Frank, in the primary.

In the entire district, Adkins defeated Franks 17,203 to 7,868.

Massie fought past seven challengers to win his primary by more than 7,000 votes.

Alecia Webb-Edginton was the second leading vote getter in the race.

Massie received 506 votes in Grant County with Webb-Edginton tallying 244.

Damon Thayer's bid for re-election to the state senate started off smoothly with a victory over Republican challenger Ricky Hostetler.

Thayer received more votes in each of the four counties — Grant, Scott, Kenton and Owen — in the district.

In all, Thayer beat his opponent by 1,540 votes on his way to face Democratic challenger David Holcomb of Georgetown in November.

In the presidential race,

Grant County Republican voters overwhelming chose Mitt Romney at the polls.
